and has plenty of music, it is bound to become popular with the voung lades.

The command, which now comprises eight batteries. Is divided into two battalions, each having a major in command with an adjutant. These are formed separately, and after the sergeants make their report of "all present or accounted for," they are then formed in line and the colonei takes charge. The battalion adjutants report to the regimental adjutant, instead of the first sergeants as heretofore, after which the leand "beats off " and the colonei puts them through the manual of arms. After the orders are published the officers form a line, march up, and salute. They then return to their companies, which are formed in column, and, headed by the band, march in review before the colonei and his adjutant, who hold their positions for this purpose. After this the troops march to their quarters and are dismissed. The passing in review may be omitted at the discretion of the colonei, but until they become thoroughly familiar with the function it will be retained as one of the features.

Governor P. T. Woodfin, of the Soldiers' Home, who is always doing something to benefit the immates, has been trying for some time to save some of the pension money which is paid to a large number of the did fellows in quarterly instalments, and which, until quite recently, went largely to the numerous salions located in the near vicinity. For a time he suspended all passes for two weeks after pension-days. This had a beneficial effect, but did not reach the root of the evil. This could only be done by cradicating the heart and to this end a branch of the Methodist church.

The Watson-Wells memorial scholarship, which is not a prize, but an aid scholarship founded in memory of the scholarship founded in memory of the work stilled by lightning last year, has been assigned by the faculty of Roamoke College to Mr. Charles L. Lexinoton, Va., June 17.—The final ball of the Washington and Lee University on Wednesday evening was the crowning event of the commencement exercises. The spacious gymnasium building was handsomely decorated by Mitteldorfer, of Richmond, and concealed in clusters the electric-lights shed an effligent glow overall. The hall was festooned and draped with the university colors—blue and white. The walls, covered with shields and flying banners of bine and white emblazoned with the enerusted bronze letters "W. & L. GOVERNORSHIP DISCUSSED.

State Convention Until July and August-How the Candidates Stand.

PETERSEURG, VA., June 17 .- The Democrats in the Southside counties will not elect their delegates to the State convention until the July or early August terms of their county courts. As yet the gubernatorial candidate has not excited any is seriously discussed will the people begin to know their individual preferences. The three gentlemen now prominently named for the office of Governor have each their for the office of Governor have each their friends, but the time for working up feeling in the matter has not yet arrived. Colonel O'Ferrail is undoubtedly very strong in this city, Major Tyler is as undoubtedly strong in the counties. Colonel Bullord has many warm friends, who have not as yet actively bestirred themselves.

No separate organization in behalf of any one of these candidates has as yet been formed anywhere in this section, and until the canyase becomes warmer hone will be. The people of Petersburg and of the Fourth District naturally feel under obligations to Colonel O'Ferrall for the manly stand he took in their behalf in the troublous days gone by and have a grateful feeling for the valuable services he has rendered them in their efforts to escape from Republican rule. The visit of Major Tyler attracted to the latter many warm friends, and the farmers desire to see one of their number who hils the bill so well nominated for trovernor.
